The city has a new favorite. Sol Smith Russell, the comedian, who Leave Watsessing-5.50 6.19 .54 7.11 7.41 7.54 8.18 has been-visiting New York for years, but never until the present time made anything more than a passing impression upon the theatre-goers. Now however, he is in the second month of a triumphant, crowd-attracting engagement at the Garden Theatre, and is so much in demand that Charles Frohman, under whose direction he is playing, is doing his best to cancel all the Comedian's out of-town contracts with a view to keeping him indefinitely at the Garden. The comedy in which Mr. Russell appears is "A Bachelor's Romance" and it is from the pen of Miss Martha Morton. It tells a pretty and interesting human hearted story of which the hero is a literary man, who, engrossed all his life in books, knows little of the wiles and ways of the world, and who therefore when he comes to feel the first touches of the tender passion presents a droll and charmingly awkward as well as comical picture. The part fits Mr. to a nicety and he imparts his own delightful personality to it. He succeeds in getting closer to the hearts of his audience by his sympathetic and natural touches than any modern comedian does that can now be recalled. He has made friends for himself and his agreeable art of all the thousands who have seen him Savings Institution. at the Garden Tneatre in "A Bachelor's Romance," and he is now firmly estab lished in the Metropolis as one of its favorite comedians. He will be always given's warm and long welcome here Associated with Mr. Sol Smith Russell in the successful comedy are several players of prominence in Charles Frohman's forces. Foremost of them is the gentle, winsome, always girlish Annie Russell, whose first New York triumph was made in the role of Esmeralda, Sh plays the part of the literary man's ward and finally marries him. The Blackguards of Malaga. Besides my man Mohammed there were several other Arab passengers aboard, and the appearance of these, as they leaned over the bulwarks of the steamer, was the signal for a shout of derisive laughter, curses and stone throwing on the part of the crowd of ill fed and ill conditioned boys who thronged the quay. For downright black guardism nothing can beat the type of the youth of Malaga, whose expression, like their morals, is of as debased a type as could well be imagined. Howls of filthy language greeted the appearance of the Moors, who, had they disembarked, would have run a great risk of being torn to pieces, so great is the antipathy of the Spaniards to their former conquerors. The captain of the steamer appealed to the police, but the two representatives of this noble body were busily employed in stealing figs from the cargo and paid little or no attention to the fact that an infuriated crowd of the worst characters of Malaga-that is to say, the worst in the world-were or $20 per quarter. pelting the steamer with stones and mud. Affairs, however, reached a cli max when one of the Moors, who spoke Spanish, asked after the health of General Margallo, the general who had been killed before Melilla, and then the cap tain was obliged to order them below, though the ill conditioned crowd hooted and jeered until at sunset the steamer left.—Harris'"From Batum to Bag-Millions of Frogs Rain Down. One of the most curious phenon of nature is the precipitation of frogs, fish, crabs, angleworms, etc., with in the annals of the French scademy and may be found in the August number, 1804. The narrative is by one Pro-fessor Pontus. In it he gives an account DIAMONDS of an instance of millions of frogs which tell in a shower near Toulouse. He states that he himself saw numerous young frogs on the coats of two gentle men who were out in the shower. Pro fessor Pontus says that he "forthwith repaired to the spot where the stora had burst and found the roads and fields literally alive with young frogs and tadpoles." "In some places," says
